[For the Whig and Courier.] Roots and Stump.

MR. Entron. Permit me to notice through your paper, an article which appeared in the Lincoln Telegraph, 21st inst over the signature of S. B. G. The writer of that article seems to have several objections to the rule I recently gave for extracting all-roots.

The first and most wonderful objection is that I ventured to introduce principles, of which, he says, "wo all knew this, long ago." Now, as this S. B. G. scenis to be double, I would ask him to unfold himself, and read my communication, with a single eye, then he may discover that I made no pretence to originality.

"Again he says, "The article proposes a new ty of principle in extracting the different roots and secondly, to obtain more easily, the divisor and subtrahend. But in both of these respects, does not show as well as can be done, the similarity in different roots; and in fact requires more figures for finding the divisor and subtrahend, than any other method." He farther says that "if the work be performed in full by both whom you have accumulated and compressed methods," the one proposed by me, " will be found to require many more figures" than the rule given by himself.

Again, the last but not the least objection is, that I have "given examples of extracting the 4th, 6th, 8th and 6th roots in full, as though it were ever necessary or desirable to extract those

B.

In referring to his last and monuntous objection, I would say there are children less than ten years old, members of a certain school in this city, who know better than to think it absolutely necessary to extract the 4th, 6th or 9th roots, for they know how to obtain the 4th by extracting the 2d root twice, and the 6th by extractshove the ancle, and tearing the flesh completty ing the 2d and 3d roots, &c. But they, having roots do not now use them for that purpose. I say they have learned a better way, because it boys who attend the evening meetings at the will take less time and figures to extract the 4th, Hasmond Street church, that the conduct of 6th and 8th roots, than by their component roots. In fine I must confess that Mr. S. B. G. does know something of the roots, and it may be profitable to know something of the stump also. We give below an extract from Mr. Adam's late speech in the House of Representative This extract comprises a portion of his reply the remarks of Mr. Wise in favor of a war with Mexico, and the annexation of Texas. The sensitive Virginian must have felt deeply the sarcasm, with which every sentence is clothed.

"If we shall go to war with Mexico, and, which necessarily follows, go to war with Great Britain, to annex Texas to this Union, the day is not remote when, in one of the slave States an invading army from abroad may be combined with an insurrection of the slaves and with a civil war, and the danger still further heightened by an irruptation of that whole body of ludians together as if for the very purpose of organizing them for a hostile movement upon our frontier I put this possibility to the representatives of the Southern States as presenting a most serious and painful consideration to my mind. The gentleman from Virginia makes very light of this. He talks to us about the star of Texas, which he calls the "lone star of liberty." Liberty and Texas! The star of Liberty illumined by the radiance of slavery restored! Yes, that is the star which is to lead us on to victory.

·So, I suppose, if war shall come, we shall not only acquire this solitary brilliant star of Riends." The rummer bolted. Texas, but we shall have all Mexico added to the United States. Sir. the Isthmus of Panama will scarcely stop our victorious arms; and I really wonder the gentleman did not carry us on to dent Houston was to plant this same lone star of Texas on the walls of the city of Mexico, and And he means, in this heroic enterprise, to lead on the brave spirits of thousands from the great valley of the Mississippi, inspirited by the hope of robbing churches and priests! So it is to be a religious as well as a civil expedition - a sort of crusade, in which the gentleman from Virginia is likely far to transcend the exploits of Tamerlane and Ghengis Khan. The gentleman is seen to plant the lone star of Text and slavery on the walls of Mexico; and then what is to become of the liberties of the United States. [A

"Is it conformable to the history of the world learned a better-way to extract the 4th and 6th that the leader of such an army, after conquests not reaching to one tenth the entent of those which the gentleman will achieve, should remain content with the station of an humble private citizens? No, no. The experience of all mankind has given us warning that if that is to be the brilliant fortunes of the gentleman from Virginia, our liberties will stand as little chance in aftertimes as those of the nine millions of the people of Mexico after he shall have conqured

"But Lam inclined to consider all this rather as approaching to what is sometimes called rhodomontade, than a thing in the serious contemplation of the gentleman from Virginia; and I look forward to the time when, in the records of history, the gentleman's name shall be placed side by side, not with the names of Ghengis Khan or Tamerlane, but with that of a still more glorious conquerer by the name of Thowas Thums. [Roars of laughter, long and loud.]
